

IN HER OWN WORDS

“Playing softball has helped me in school. If I didn’t play sports, I’m not sure that I would have the drive to stay in school and pursue a career. Playing softball helps me to set my priorities regarding my grades, not only for myself but for my team.”

— Veronica Ollier, California high school softball player

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

What Is Title IX?

Title IX, a federal law passed in 1972, gives female athletes the right to participate equally in sports in public schools, including elementary, middle, and high schools, colleges and universities.

Example: At your local public high school, the number of team slots and the quality of facilities, uniforms, scheduling and coaching must be equal for boys and girls; tight budgets are no excuse for inequality.

What Is AB 2404?

AB 2404, a California law passed in 2004, requires equity in local youth athletics, such as sports programs run by your parks and recreation department. The law is much like Title IX in calling for equal athletic opportunities, facilities, publicity, and more. But, only a handful of California's 500+ parks and recreation departments are applying the law!

Example: Where leagues for boys' baseball and girls' softball are offered by local parks, field space must be equitable.

This includes the quality of lighting, dugouts, and storage space for equipment.

DID YOU KNOW?

Progress

- * Prior to Title IX, fewer than 300,000 girls competed in high school sports; now there are over 3 million.
- * California was the first state to pass gender equity legislation for parks and recreation athletics.

Education

- * Overall, young women who play sports have higher grades and score higher on standardized tests than non-athletes.
- * African American female athletes are 15% more likely to graduate from college compared to their non-athletic peers; Latina females who play sports are more likely to graduate from high school and attend college than those not playing.

Health

- * Females who had the highest physical activity during adolescence and young adulthood were 20% less likely to get breast cancer later in life.
- * Women and girls who participate in regular exercise experience lower rates of depression.

Employment

- * Girls who play sports in high school go on to earn 7% higher annual wages than their non-athlete peers.
- * Title IX directly increased women's participation in the labor force, while opening paths to higher-skill, previously male-dominated positions.
